NAVAL PLANS CONDEMNED

ment," said either foreign or domestic to enforce and the size of either is the first or only essential". The country, he said, had 80,000,000 of patriotic people, and it is in those that the strength of our nation exists and not in our standing army or our permanent naval establishment."

Continuing, Mr. Tawney declared that "the strength of our policies and the ability of our government to enforce them will always be measured by ourselves and by foreign nations not by the size of our army but by the resources, the patriotism and the loyalty of the people who at all times are known to be ready and willing to sacrifice their property and even their lives in the defense of their institutions."

The people, therefore, he argued, should not be encouraged to surrender that self-reliance, that consciousness of superior individual strength as a nation by trying to teach them to, rely on a standing army and navy in time of peace, large enough to be capable to successfully complete with the armies and navies of the world and one of the time war."

Discussing the question of war, Mr. Tawney said that if there was any reason to apprehend war with any foreign power within the next decade, the information which the apprehension was based upon had been carefully withheld from the legislative department of the government. He asserted that the geographic isolation of the U. S. was an asset far more valuable as a means of defense, than all the navies we could build if we did not possess this advantage. "Mr. Tawney that the U. S. in past had pursued a bungling naval policy, and he pointed out that the journey of the Atlantic fleet to the Pacific was made possible only through the aid of 38 vessels flying a foreign flag. "A more disgusted spectacle was never witnessed, he said and he condemned the naval policy which had overlooked auxiliary vessels to supply a fleet with the means absolutely essential to its existence. "It may be," he said in conclusion, "that this great mistake is due to the fact that a collier which is as essential to the efficiency of the navy as a battleship is not so attractive, does not involve the expenditure of so much money and does not afford the opportunity for the same pyrotechnic display upon the ocean or at the summer resorts along the coast and for that reason we have made the mistake of building a navy that to-day in order to make its voyage from one ocean to another is obliged to reply upon the vessels belonging to other nations."

BOY'S LONG FAST.

Locked up Four Days in Freight Car Going from Frisco to Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 15.—Nicholas Klein, 14 years old, last night, asked the police to take him to a hospital for treatment.

He said he had been locked in a freight car for four days and nights. He said his home was in San Francisco and he is on his way to visit his sister in Marietta. He said he boarded a Santa Fe train in San Francisco and went to sleep. When he awoke the door of the car had been sealed and he was unable to get out until the door was unlocked in Chicago. He was taken to the county hospital, and is in a serious condition.

been adopted and the delegates named, scene of the wildest disorder followed the reading of the names of the new state committees. The delegates from the several districts protested that the names were not those selected. The chairman replied that the question was whether the convention through its own committee should be empowered to name a new state committee. The aisles were crowded with delegates denouncing the proposition. Order could not be restored, the delegates refusing to be seated and the police for many minutes were powerless to keep them quiet. It was then past midnight and the excitement was greater than during the McCarren incident. At the height of the disturbance the sergeant-at-arms was knocked from the platform. The committee's report was finally declared carried. The convention adjourned at 12:30 a. m.

THIEF OUTWITTED.

CHICAGO, April 15.—Mrs. Isadore J. Kusel outwitted a thief yesterday by conversing with him over the telephone until the police who had been notified arrested him.

The robber, Harry Mendoza, had been employed to do some paper hanging in the Kusel residence, and he stole $1000 worth of jewelry. After notifying the police of the theft, Mrs. Kusel called up Mendoza by telephone from her home and kept up a conversation with him until the police arrested him in his shop. The jewelry was recovered.

EDISON'S CONCRETE HOUSE.

The first authentic article on the Edison monolithic house, which has excited such wide and varying comment from both the technical and general press, appears in the current issues of Cement Age from the pen of E. S. Larned. Among other conclusions drawn from an interview with Mr. Edison Mr. Larned states that the Edison cheap concrete house is primarily intended for families living in the congested tenement district of the large cities, who find at present a minimum rental of $9 per month for two or three rooms with poor light, poor air, poor sanitation, to be accompanied with appalling fire risks and generally unattractive and demoralizing surroundings. In order that the cost of living should not be enhanced, it is necessary in taking these families into the suburbs or country districts, to fix the rental sufficiently low so that the difference between the present rates and the proposed rate will cover the cost of trolley transportation to and from the city or place of employment. Mr. Edison claims that the cost of the proposed house is estimated at $1,200, including plumbing, heating and lighting fixtures. The house is intended for two families, and the rental required on a five per cent. investment basis would be sufficient under the present conditions to more than cover the expense of transportation of the head of the household. Cement in all forms of construction has come to be and for this reason alone, if for no other, the public mind is inclined to accept this idea of house construction with confidence in its possibilities, and those of the poorer classes, for whom it is expressly intended, are anxiously awaiting its first practical demonstration.
